Special Correspondence of the Missouri Democrat Horrible Massacre by the Indians And Mormons—Other Interesting Items.

Camp Eagle, October 12, 1859.

Your correspondent has determined upon departing from his post, and will leave in a few days for San Francisco via Los Angeles and the scene of the Mountain Meadow massacre. The snow-capped hills that surround our camp have warned me that the piercing blast of winter are upon us, and that if I do not get away I will stand very poor chance of getting away. Times are very dull here, and there is every prospect of tighter about. Since the first of the month over two hundred persons have left for the States. The Indians on the northern California route are still engaged in massacring the emigrants. There is no doubt but those Indians are aided and abetted by Mormons. There is at this time in camp a party that effected their escape, after their friends to the number of twenty-three had been massacred.

These people have given a statement to Judge Hobbs, under oath, and state that the greater portion of their foes were white, like Indians. Some of the parties perpetrated surpass all belief. One child about four years of age, had both its legs cut off, and was compelled to walk upon the stumps in the presence of its agonized mother. Several of the women were ravished, and then killed. One woman was ravished, having both her legs and arms broken; others had their entrails ripped out.

A company of soldiers were in pursuit, and had several shapes of being able to come up to the savages.

Bill Hickman's Daughard still continues to scour Salt Lake City.

A young man by the name of Clay killed a man by the name of Fouts on last Sunday, at noon, and was arrested and placed under guard, but was rescued a few nights since.
